Presentation, discussion, and possible action on the 2019 Citizen Survey.

Relationship to Strategic Goals:

- Good Governance

Recommendation: Staff recommends the city council receive the report.

Summary: From April 1-30, National Service Research (NSR) of Fort Worth surveyed College Station residents to help the city assess and prioritize a wide range of services and needs. NSR mailed surveys to 8,000 randomly-selected households, which also had the option of completing the survey online. Any College Station resident could complete the online survey. Participants were asked to rate various city services, quality of life issues and community characteristics, and to rank their priorities.

Public Communications publicized the survey through local media outlets along with the city's website, cable TV channel, and social media. A total of 1,236 responses were received, including 856 online and 380 by mail. About 23 percent of the sample were students from Texas A&M and Blinn College. The margin of error for this sample size at a 95 percent confidence level is plus or minus 2.9 percent.

Representative samples were received from four geographic areas within the city. The survey report also features a benchmark comparison with other Texas cities that conducted surveys within the last two years.

NSR performed the city's most recent citizen surveys in 2012 and 2016 as well as the Parks & Recreation Needs Assessment Survey last fall.

Budget & Financial Summary: The city paid NSR $10,420 to administer the survey. Other firms were considered, but NSR was selected because of its experience in conducting city surveys and its relatively low cost.
